London-based Ambassador's Reception have compiled a CD of Loud E's unreleased edits for release later this month.

The Dutch disco obsessive began his international DJing career after submitting a series of mixes to I-F's now defunct internet radio station, CBS. With stacks of rare and obscure disco and italo already in his collection, he made quite a name for himself just off the back of his DJing, but soon started to edit his own tracks together from records that he found difficult to play in their entirety.

In the past, vinyl releases of his edits have appeared on labels such as Big Bear, Must and Ambassador's Reception, but this collection marks the first time that his edits will be made available on CD. Entitled Loudefied, the album drifts from propulsive numbers for the floor through to lush downbeat vocoder action and appeals to disco dancers just as much as the trainspotters that will inevitably dedicate themselves to searching for the original tracks.
